Excerpt: .But it was not that so much which was occupying her thoughts. It was the strange consciousness that the sting of all that was gone; that it did not affect her as it had then done; and that she was somehow or other independent of it. Those old regrets, she realized, seldom assailed her now. She enjoyed, she hardly knew why or how, a new and restful sense of giving entire satisfaction. Some one, at any rate, seemed to approve of her; seemed to care to talk to her, to know what she felt and thought, and to listen to what she said with a certain appreciation and respectful interest and attention, which was as novel as it was encouraging and delightful. And this now not only in their walks together, but in general society and general conversation. She felt in his presence what...
