Not illustrated. 1847 Excerpt: .searching for the boats, no vestige of them could be seen; and, therefore, when half-past nine, P. M., came, we made up our minds that they were all lost; and, as the wind howled hoarsely through the rigging, and the waves beat savagely against our ship, some of us imagined that they could occasionally hear the captain s voice, ordering the ship to bear up, while the boats had been 6een more than fifty times by anxious spirits, who had strained their eyes through the gloom until fancy robbed them of their true speculation, and left her phantasmagoria in exchange. We all looked in that direction, and in a few minutes we could plainly perceive it; in a short time we were close up with it, when, to our great joy, we found the captain and all the men in the boats, lying to leeward of the dead whale, which had, in some measure, saved them from the violence of the sea. They had only just been able to procure a light, having unfortunately upset all their tinder through the violent motion of the boats, by which it became wet, but which they succeeded in igniting after immense application of the flint and steel; or their lantern would have been suspended from an oar directly after sunset, which is the usual practice when boats are placed under such circumstances. On the morning of the 18th of June, 1832, while we were still fishing in the offshore...
